

Sandy McPherson

Sandy considers herself to be a community connector and advocate for the environment.

As a grandmother and elder she devotes her life to volunteering in activities that build resilience and adaptation to the climate crisis.

Sandy was recognized for her service with the BC Achievement Community award in 2019.

Through her membership in the BC Women's Institute, Sandy helped draft the resolution for advocating for alkaline Hydrolysis in BC.

As she says "I've been a 'greenie' for six decades and I want to die being one."
